HOUSTON'S JEFFERSON DAVIS HOSPITAL HONORED BY HGTV'S RESTORE AMERICA INITIATIVE IN PARTNERSHIP WITH THE NATIONAL TRUST FOR HISTORIC PRESERVATION

Washington, D.C. (November 28, 2005) – HGTV, America's leading home and lifestyle network, the National Trust for Historic Preservation and co-sponsor Time Warner Cable today announced that the Jefferson Davis Hospital in Houston, Texas, has been selected from more than 100 applicants as the newest addition to HGTV's Restore America initiative. To help further the renaissance of its diverse First Ward neighborhood, the site will receive a $50,000 grant to transform the hospital into a residential building with 34 live/work units for artists and their families. In addition, it will be highlighted in a special vignette on HGTV.com and in a public service announcement that will air on HGTV throughout December.

A Classical Revival-style red brick structure, Jefferson Davis Hospital is the third of 12 sites to be featured in this year's HGTV's Restore America initiative – the national public affairs partnership that HGTV forged with the National Trust to raise awareness of historic preservation. Other initiative co-sponsors include Bank of America, Lowe's and Marvin Windows and Doors. Since 2003, the campaign has provided $3 million to fund 36 restoration projects across the country and has elevated the importance of preservation through on-air and online efforts. For 2005-2006, HGTV's Restore America initiative has awarded grants ranging from $25,000 to $100,000 to fund 12 community revitalization projects. Each selected site is highlighted at www.nationaltrust.org/restore_america/2005.

The Jefferson Davis Hospital, opened in 1924, was the first city-owned hospital in Houston to accept indigent patients. It is rumored that the hospital, constructed atop City Cemetery, Houston's second oldest municipal cemetery, was named after Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy, to defuse the public outcry that occurred when the people learned that the city was erecting a new hospital on a site containing Confederate graves. Due to the city's rapid growth, the original four-story hospital became inadequate and was replaced by a new Jefferson Davis Hospital in 1938. Although the first hospital served various functions over the years, it remained vacant for the past two decades, was plagued by vandalism, and become notorious for being "haunted".

Upcoming Featured Sites scheduled to air on HGTV:
January 2006 – Lucien Moore House, Detroit, Michigan
February 2006 – Pacific Electric Building, Los Angeles, California
March 2006 – Martha G. Ripley Maternity Hospital, Minneapolis, Minnesota
